Program Director of Computer Science Dr. Peilong Li	Dr. Li is the Program Director of Computer Science at Elizabethtown College. He believes that a centralized location for tutors would be very helpful. He sees the current amount of students attending tutoring as slightly concerning, and thinks that anything that further incentivizes students to attend tutoring would be greatly helpful. As a professor, he thinks that anything that provides him insight on the struggles of his students is invaluable to designing lectures.
Assistant Director of Academic Advising Michelle Henry	Michelle Henry is the Assistant Director of Academic Advising at Elizabethtown College. She oversees the Learning Zone, which is the largest tutoring body on campus. She is excited by the idea of a centralized location for all tutors. She stated that the current system is too scattered and it needs to be organized. Anything that gets students to tutors faster is a win in her eyes. She also took a keen interest in the bonus metrics JayWing hopes to provide.
Learning Zone Tutor, Coding Coach, and Current Student Joey Wagner	Joey Wagner is a current student, tutor, and Coding Coach at Elizabethtown College. He believes that a centralized location for tutoring would benefit all students all at the college. “Making the connection between tutors and tutees easier could never hurt. Plus, I believe many students don’t realize how many resources are available to them because of how scattered they are across the campus. A centralized location may give tutees opportunities they didn’t know they had before.”
Coding Coach and Current Student Alex Roop	Alex Roop is a current student, and Coding Coach at Elizabethtown College. He is excited for the improved forms of communication between tutor and tutee. As a tutor, he wants to be best prepared to help his tutees. JayWing Academy can help him do that.
Mindset Mentor and Current Student Keagan Kinney	Keagan Kinney is a current student and Mindset Mentor at Elizabethtown College. He feels as though the current methods of communication used by the Mindset Mentors might not be the most efficient and thus a universal location may be very helpful. He added that a calendar and scheduling feedback feature would be very useful in determining what times work best for everyone.
Mindset Mentor and Learning Zone Tutor James Hutchins	“As a tutor, I used the old system to communicate with students very often. I found the fact that we had to mostly just wait for an email to appear and know to look for them to be a little odd when I started, but I got used to it. I was always a little bit worried about missing a student and then not getting the help they needed. It still seemed like a clunky solution, and having a dedicated means to connect with students would greatly streamline that process.”
